Chapter 1 by Riggio Scoffic

He put the paper bag on the counter, the flowers on his living room coffee table, then removed the gun from his coat then place it on the table, he removed the chocolates from the bag and opened up the packaging and then the lid. He sat down on the couch then leaned back before turning on the television, then aimed the remote at stereo turning on some music, he picked up a clipboard, then a pen, then started drawing cartoons.

He drew a man buying chocolates and a gun, then, saying "Someone's going to have to pay for this. Someone is going to have to do something." Mike Bradly bought a gun that day," he wrote beneath the drawing. Then continued to draw some chocolates and a bottle of water. The wind was blowing hard so he had trouble balancing the narrator so with the stereo on and the wind blowing he could hear the glass of the windows vibrating between the window frames.

"Wes?" he heard from behind.

And he turned around and saw Tam standing in the doorway. Wes picked up the remote, aimed it at the stereo turning it off and got off the couch.

"You get the gun?"

Yea- I got it."

"Lets go."

"Now, what?" said Wes.

"Now we wait- they'll be here."

"so you're a cop?" said Tam.

Wes laughed, "fuck you," he said.

"You dumped Lily and now you're getting played." said Tam

"What are you talking about?" said Wes.

"This is a set up -- I'm just giving you the heads up."

"I've got a gun."

I told you, I'm giving you a heads up."

"Let's get out of here."

"Sit"

"I'm just messing with you, I'm just messing with you. But she knows you know."

"I told her- we talked about it - How the fuck do you know about it?"

"We were having drinks last night and she told us about it."
